

Dublin Disrupting Thinking Research 1st Event

COVID 19 Global Challenges -
The Economic and Financial Dimensions"

Location: Dublin, Republic of Ireland

The Call for papers is now open

Research Contributions -
Submissions Deadline: 6th December 2021

Disrupting Thinking research event aims to distinguish from the format of "traditional research conferences". We seek to develop and nurture a network of researchers that think out of the box. The economic and financial field needs disruptive critical thinking and contributions from different disciplines and fields that bring new perspectives and challenge existing knowledge and the status quo. We endeavour to offer a forum that enables and encourages innovative and disruptive studies that challenge and bring new perspectives to the way we engage with research in the economic and financial field through a sociopolitical and environmental dimension. Research contributions aiming to support and develop our understanding of our international economic and financial reality through an interdisciplinary, multidisciplinary, and especially a transdisciplinary research approach are encouraged from practitioners and young and well-established researchers. Research ideas can be submitted for review by the scientific committee at CLEF.research@tudublin.ie

Publication Opportunities:

Papers presented at Disrupting Thinking 01 would be invited by our Senior Scientific committee for publication at special issues. Special issues would be edited by Prof. Bernadette ANDREOSSO-O'CALLAGHAN, Prof. Jacques JAUSSAUD, and Dr Lucia MORALES.
